Prosperity Is Natural
A Cham Store Question
Airplanes Fight Flies

The chain store relies on organization to keep prices low and output of products high.

What will happen to quality if the brand comes to mean nothing and the chain store means everything?

For the consumer quality is more important than low price or convenience.

A combination of cottonseed oil and other imitations will not permanently take the place of real olive oil.

Wine chain stores will be to emphasize quality and avoid killing off those that produce quality.

Mediteranean fruit fly spreading dangerously in Florida is to be fought with poisonous gas.

Airplanes flying low have been used against the boll weevil and may fight the fruit fly living over orchards and other breeding places.

CREW PRAISED

Passenger Says Morale, Discipline of Sailors on Ship Good

CLEVELAND, May 7.—Morale and discipline of the storm-battered City of Buffalo's crew, during the two days and nights the boat was drifting off the mercy of a Lake Erie gale last week, was praised by German Unifair, a local pilot and passenger during a recent trip.

Unifair, 611 E. 12th, Thomas W. Gault, reporter of storm vessels at this port, said there was no fighting among the crew, as had been reported in newspapers, and that the only disturbance was caused by a potato peeler and a brass polisher, both assigned below deck. The men were quickly quieted, Unifair said, and the passengers were unaware of the disorder.

Captain Gould will continue his investigation of the eventual trip tomorrow.

If you want to do something as wild, more daring, more adventurous as certainly as your mother.

The port is a busy and with other people. At this you won't succeed as well as you ought to.

INJURED MAN FOUND

LYING BESIDE TRACK

Charles Wolfe, of Pittsburgh, Falls from Train Near Owens

His body covered with blood-soaked bandages, a man giving his name as Charles Wolfe of Pittsburgh, was found at 5 o'clock this morning near the Owens railroad station on the Hooking Valley tracks where he had been since 2 o'clock this morning. He was helpless and exhausted when found, but was conscious.

He was first seen by a track walker about 8 o'clock this morning. Mel Griffin, of Columbus, who had gone to Owens for a load of lime, was summoned by the track walker Griffin brought the man to the local police station.

Griffin said Wolfe was so covered with blood and bandages the color of his skin could not be recognized.

Wolfe was taken from the police station to the Marion City hospital by Charles M. Tolson, city relief officer.

Hospital officials say he has no broken bones, or internal injuries.

Wolfe said he must have fallen asleep and dropped from the moving freight train on which he was riding last night. He evidently relied clear of the wheels of the train, which would have crushed him, but his condition indicated he had been dragged some distance. He said he had been doing work on a construction gang in Columbus until a week ago, and left there to seek work on the road. He said he was going to Bellevue when he fell from the train.

Wolfe's head was a mass of cuts and bruises, his shoulder was badly hurt, he complained his left knee was hurting him.

New SOHIO MOTOR OIL free from harmful wax

New de-waxing process gives 100% paraffin base oil extra qualities

100% pure Paraffin base oils are acknowledged to be the world's finest lubricants. Such an oil is New Sohio Motor Oil. And now comes a new, spectacular process that gives extra qualities to even this fine oil by making it free from harmful wax!

Being all lubricant, New Sohio Motor Oil affords greater protection against friction. Excess wax in motor oil has no value as a lubricant, and its presence materially impairs lubricating efficiency. Complete removal of this harmful wax insures cooler, smoother operation, even under the most strenuous driving conditions.

Another thing: because New Sohio Motor Oil is free from harmful wax, it forms an oilier, more even lubricating film between piston ring and cylinder wall. Unburned gasoline from the combustion chamber has a hard time seeping through this piston seal. The tough, strong texture of New Sohio's Paraffin base makes it peculiarly immune to crankcase dilution. And because New Sohio is pure oil, its use in your car will insure a minimum of carbon formation.

Try it in your own car and watch your thermometer and your speedometer for convincing proof of New Sohio Motor Oil's superiority. For sale at all Red-White-and-Blue Standard service stations and by hundreds of dealers everywhere in Ohio.

ADVANCED NEW PROCESS
REMOVES WAX
AT 40° BELOW ZERO

Excess wax in motor oil causes trouble. Most manufacturers of good oils now de-wax by centrifugal action, employing the widely known principle of the farm cream separator. But the method used in the manufacture of Sohio Motor Oil performs this vital operation at the extreme temperature of 40° below zero, producing oil free from harmful wax. The results:

- 1 Little or no carbon.
- 2 Flexible viscosity—perfect motor lubrication at all temperatures.
- 3 Perfect piston seal—full power and least danger of oil dilution.

DR. CARPENTIER REPLIES:
 "I'm really speaking as the man of labor and work the same." This argument is a science class and was approved to name your opinion.—D. W., Back

There are four or five in a science
 you each to have a scientific definition work to begin with. It is this. We take the meaning of science through a and a distance.
 The scientific unit of work in Engineering is foot pound and a foot pound is defined as a pressure of one pound exerted through space of one foot.
 One of this definition of work we do know which is defined as the resistance work is done this is a horse power for foot pounds exerted in one second which is the same thing as a foot pound exerted in one minute.
 The idea of power unit reduces the time in addition to that of this and you have the unit of work which is exerted on force without regard to a motion—distance. Then you in science the unit of distance or "pace" through with the unit of force and the combination of distance becomes work per unit of

And the three together constitute a whole which is called power.

Thus, if a horse can lift a weight of one pound to a height of one foot, it takes one unit of power to lift a weight of one pound to the height of one foot in one second.

Let's now show how very important it is to get the idea of velocity. It is the rate at which work is done. But it depends upon the intensity of the force employed. A 5 gram expenditure of force on a pound weight one foot in a second is to raise a one foot in a minute.

So we come to another idea—the energy. Energy is the heat value of work or the capacity to do work or produce work. It is scientifically equivalent to the product of the mass—weight—multiplied by the velocity squared. To find this 4 foot pounds divide by the two the acceleration of gravity. Thus a weight of one ton moving with a velocity of 100 feet a second would have a kinetic energy of 2 000 times 1 000 000 times one half equal 1 000 000 000 units which divided by the two gives 500 000 000 foot pounds equal to 57.2 horsepower expended in one second.

Now once more back to your question.

whether the labor is the same or not. It would be the same if a machine could talk or move if it were conscious of itself without the power of talking. The scientist says that there is no work if there is no motion. That is true enough by his definition of work, according to that a table holding up a weight that is almost sufficient to break it down does no work at all because the weight remains motionless. It exerts pressure to be such but scientifically pressure is not work until it produces motion. The scientist had no walking delegates to look out for when he

In his calculations he uses the power of the horse and of the man to furnish and of work but he makes his rules regardless of all human or animal feeling. In a world where there is no element of conscious effort involved in the scientific meaning of work, as long as the coming robots shall be unable to call a meeting and organize for the hours and strike again, a machine pressure being often the hardest kind of labor.

Author of "The Forbidden Door" Landon writes another thrilling mystery story, the adventures of "the Gray Phantom"

SYNOPSIS OF THE STORY
A man escapes from a prison and is taken to a place called "The Gray Phantom" by a man named "the Gray Phantom". The man is taken to a place called "The Gray Phantom" by a man named "the Gray Phantom". The man is taken to a place called "The Gray Phantom" by a man named "the Gray Phantom".

remind you of it at this late day. I supposed that with time and the war you were safe. That was a half mistake. Craig had stood in your way. Half of the profits from the Climax Oil swindle belonged to him and he threatened to expose you unless you made a fair division. You thought the simplest way out of the difficulty was to get rid of him. He remembered the night you lured him to your rooms and killed him. It was there cleverly arranged. You felt certain that no living soul knew what happened in your rooms that night.

As far as appearances went no one did but you were wrong, nevertheless. Now you're going to pay Craig—par with your life.

An agonized groan sounded in the room then all was still for a few moments. Mr. Craig glanced anxiously at the door. Despite the freezing fear that clutched him a feeble hope rose through the walls were extraordinarily heavy it was possible the shot had been heard outside the room. If so the servants might come to his rescue any moment. Though it seemed an infinitesimal chance he had passed since the firing of the shot. Still another hope occurred to him as he nudged his way for a way of escape. Bell might soon recover consciousness and come to his aid though just at present with the light shining from the fire on his face he looked as if he were dead. A respite of but a few moments might reverse the situation. Mr. Craig resolved to fence for time.

Don't kill me, he begged. I am rich. I'll give you anything you ask. A desperate exclamation was the response. Oh yes I know you are rich. You built up quite a fortune on the money you stole from Jack Grey. But you have had your chance to settle the matter on a cash basis. Craig gave you simple warning but you paid no attention. Now it is too late. You refused to pay in cash so you will have to pay in blood.

Again Mr. Craig looked at the door then at the unconscious man in the chair. He gave you half a million, he declared. That's a good deal more than your life is worth. But I can't accept it. A million.

No Craig. A million is a lot but I couldn't consider it. I advised you yesterday to get the money from your bank but you refused to act on my suggestion. You can't obtain such an amount without making a trip to New York and you are such a slippery individual that I can't trust you to live up to your promise after you leave this room.

It'll stay right here, promised Mr. Craig eagerly. I'll send a messenger for the money. And the messenger would bring the money back with him. Besides no bank would deliver such a large sum to a messenger without making sure that every thing was on the level.

It'll give you a check. You would stop payment by telephone as soon as I was out of your sight. Anyway a check for a million might prove hard to cash. I'll give you the unmarked truth. Craig I've been nursing a hatred against you for a long long time. It's the kind of hatred that money can't quench. Even if you had delivered the money you wanted I would have killed you just the same. I don't care for all the dirty millions you ever had. It's your life I'm after and I've come to take it. My idea in sending you those notes was just to give you a taste of what was going to happen. I wanted you to suffer a few tortures beforehand. That's how I hate you—you viper.

The words were spoken in a tone of finality that shattered the last remnant of Mr. Craig's hope. He tried to speak, but only a few guttural groans came.

He some little time to break in. Craig saw right where you were. If I could get a single step you will have taken your death.

Mr. Craig had been edging toward the door but the threat made him stop. A wild pounding sounded on the door. He was torn between life and death. If he could only stay in the enormous hall a little longer. Don—don't kill me! he begged. I'll give you everything I have.

The door gave an evil taunting laugh. No use, Craig. It's too late. Your order was your last chance to get money from the bank. Let me tell you something. I could have told you five minutes ago while you were adding for your life but I didn't want to tip you off. I'm a doctor. I'll tell you all your nails are a deep red as the Atlanta Trust Co. It's a bad sign, Craig.

Well you won't live to regret it. Mr. Craig's new-sprung hope that if a miracle could save him, he would see that the Atlanta Trust Co. would be cleaned out by the last of the month. The door was a trap to come off at midnight. All right, it is all over now. The doctors will be lucky if they get the rent on the floor but most of them are wealthy and can stand the loss. Now you understand why I can't bargain with you.

The tumult at the door grew louder but for the present Mr. Craig's mind was all but paralyzed. He had just heard a doctor's words. He had just heard a doctor's words. He had just heard a doctor's words.

Oh Mr. Craig uttered a low, long drawn groan. The Gray Phantom. A furious din at the door sounded as if a heavy piece of furniture had been rammed against the panel. Interrupted! He looked aside and in the same instant a hand seized his throat as if an irresistible force hurled him to the floor. The hand at his throat relaxed but a knee pressed firmly against his chest.

For heavens sake—don't—don't kill me, he spluttered chokingly with a violent but unavailing effort to shake off the weight that held him down. Again a loud crash sounded at the door.

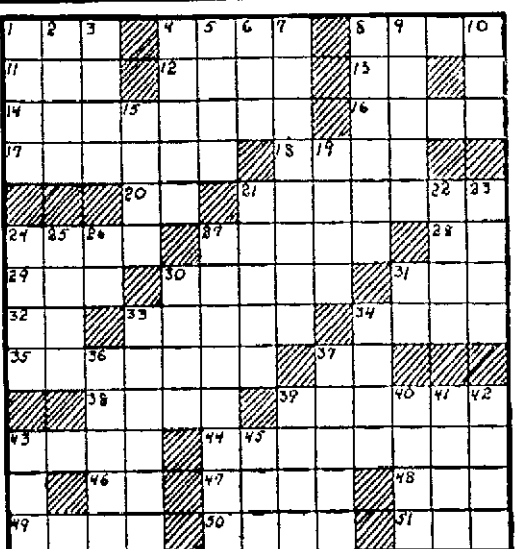

No use, Craig. I heard a voice in his ear. You didn't listen when I told Jack Grey to get out of your life. You had him down on the floor just as I have you now. How do you know, asked Mr. Craig in a weak, horrified tone. Who are you?

You will see in a moment—but you will never live to tell what you see. A hand closed chokingly over Mr. Craig's windpipe. The scratch of a match sounded in the darkness and the flame was held close to his starling eyes. A moment of a brief instant the face of his assailant. A violent convulsion seized him. A name rose raspantly in his tortured throat and then the match went out leaving no other light than a feeble glimmer in the fireplace. For a moment just before it fell with a swift downward motion a hand was silhouetted against the yellow glow.

Love's Awakening

The Heart Story of a Woman's Lasting Affection

BY ADELE GARRISON

Mrs. Ticer agrees to keep Katie in the dark. I shot a whimsical smile at my plump neighbor as she voiced the belief that I had something to tell her. She has watched me for some time. I teased. But you're right. I have something to tell you and ask you. (Value isn't necessary, she said.) Just tell me what you want done.

Thank you. I returned heartily. We haven't much time to waste upon empty formality at that. But you must let me say first how glad I am that you are coming, to the firm house to help us through the next few days.

Her face grew grave. You know I'd come any time she said. I told Mrs. Underwood. But I didn't tell her that I was afraid. Katie got up in the air which she found out. I was coming to the farm. Mrs. Underwood didn't hitch very well you know.

I know one thing that the fault isn't in Katie. I say heartily with the consciousness that I was well. All the truth for indeed Katie's gentle nature was a me. I was in the truth for indeed Katie's gentle nature was a me. I was in the truth for indeed Katie's gentle nature was a me.
